PARIS, JUNE 13.

COUNCIL OF FIVE HUNDRED.

23d Prarial, June 11.

Baron Poisquetin called the attention of the council to the calamities which again threatened the western departments. The Chouans were once more becoming formidable; they were armed, organised, and appeared in numerous bands in the departments of la Sartha, la Mayenna, the Maine, and Loire. Their standards were displayed, their drums were distinctly heard, and they daily committed outrages. In the course of seven days they had assassinated 26 persons. He therefore propoled an augmentation of the 600 brigades of Gend. now on foot, at an expence of 1,900,000 livers. The motion was referred to the Commission of Finance.

On the proposition of Francais, the Council of Five Hundred have adopted the plan of an address to the people, conceived in the following terms:

The Legislative Body to the French People.

Frenchmen, the moment is arrived when your representatives can no longer remain silent without being criminal. When to conceal their sentiments, would not only be a public misfortune, but a crime against the state; the most urgent and the most holy of our duties—liberty! which you have acquired at the price of so much blood, and so many sacrifices, is again threatened, and our common country, so long triumphant, is exposed to new dangers. Two months have hardly elapsed between Italy, a republic, and victorious under our banners, and the same country attacked by a savage conqueror.

The ambitious and bloody house of Austria, the English, those ingenious and perfidious artisans of all political crimes, have joined to their plans the Porte, and Russia, and by a monstrous alliance, they flatter themselves that they shall be able to divide among them the territory of France. It only remains for you to decide whether you will be freemen or slaves; whether you will be Frenchmen or Austrians;—whether you will preserve your own property, or become the property of a conqueror, who would chain you down to his estates, and force you to march under his standard.

A foreign power makes no distinction in the different opinions which divide you—he confounds you all in one indiscriminate hatred. It is enough that you are Frenchmen to be guilty. It is enough that you are industrious or rich, to make him desirous of your spoils; and he who in the secret wish of a corrupted heart, calls for the aid of a foreign power, would see, if his wishes were gratified, what consequences would follow—his house burnt, his children killed by barbarians, whom he had the folly to consider as his deliverers.

The object of the new coalition is to revive in Europe the ancient barbarism, to destroy all knowledge, and all republics; to remove from the face of the earth, all the monuments and all the institutions which could call to our recollection great objects; to banish all liberal and generous sentiments from our hearts, to call back again into action, all our prejudices, and all our superstitions; and in the midst of this gloomy night to aggrandize and strengthen two or three bloody thrones, to whom are attached an oppressive nobility, a ruinous feudal system, an inquisitorial treasury, and all the dreadful train of misery and slavery connected with these evils.

The assassination of our Plenipotentiaries, while negociating a peace, may shew what they would do, when in hostility with a people. Would they, who have never respected the laws of nations, pay any respect to the rights of the people?—This war then is the cause of all Frenchmen, and there is not one whatever may be his political opinion, who must not lose every thing by an invasion, which would confound all in one general ruin and servitude.

Frenchmen who inhabit the Alps, and who have hastened to the defence of those bulwarks with which nature have been pleased to cover our country, throw from the summit of those mountains your ferocious enemies. The armies may have been surprised in Italy, but they have not been conquered. Directed by another minister, commanded by skilful generals, and reinforced by new warriors, with which they every day see their phalanxes increase, they will soon rescue the tract of victory. But as the interior is the source which feeds and nourishes the army, it is that which must be animated and enlivened.

May the friends of liberty, too long proscribed and pursued by the Royalists, assume that appearance which becomes their virtues, and manifest the just pride of having served their country; may the purchasers of national demesnes become sensible that they have nothing to hope from the interference of a foreign power, and that all which has hitherto supported the republic, still support it; they judge what Kings are preparing for them, by the swords which their troops have over our heads.

Let those who are enlightened, inform their fellow: let those who are energetic, communicate to them a portion of the electric fire; let him who has strength come forward to defend them; him who has riches to assist them. It is in this general display of our moral and physical faculties that the enemy should recognize the French people. Let all those who are declined by law to march to the Frontiers, obey the command, let the cowardly be pursued, the taxes be paid, the Royalists be well watched, the Austrians be arrested and punished, and let government be assisted, not only with all the means which duty commands, but also with all those which zeal can suggest. It is in vain that odium is attempted to be thrown upon pure republicans, by the hacknied and opprobrious epithets with which they are loaded. The legislative body cannot be deceived by all these manœuvres, which by discouraging the republicans, and increasing the courage of the royalists, have several times endangered the Republic. The Legislative Body are not desirous of animating the revolutionary passions, but of exerting all the generous and liberal affections, and of making liberty not the patrimony of some, but the right of all Frenchmen.

It is the wish of your representatives that law should be the right, as it is the duty of all, and that no one should either invoke it in vain, or violate it with impunity. You have seen this year with what religious respect all the choices which you have made have been respected by your representatives. Schisms, and all ambitious plots have vanished before the great principle which has every where made legal majorities triumph. Laws shall be made to prevent the ruinous consequences of these schisms.

Numerous complaints have been made against the conduct of several agents of the directory, accused of a dilapidation and plunder, as well in the interior, as among the allied republics. The law will place the guilty under the hand of justice, and the directory will drive away the cloud of vultures, who follow the armies, and besiege all the avenues to power.

The responsibility of the executive agents shall be organized; the accounts of the ministers shall be solemnly published, and severely scrutinized; the most rigorous economy shall be introduced respecting the expenditures; the liberty of persons and opinions shall be secured by severe laws; but the great means of administering and executin those laws is in the hands of the directory, and as faithful observers of these laws, we will never excede the limits which our duty prescribes to us, as the directory, on their part, shall never exceed theirs. Tyranny begins where powers are invaded, or accumulate too greatly the liberty of all, and the balance of those powers, and it is always to some causes which have deranged that balance, or which have prevented it from being established, that faults and reverses are to be attributed.

Frenchmen, the difficulties which surround us are great, but the courage of your representatives is still greater. They can have no other fear than that of not fulfilling their duty—no other passion than that of seeing you free and triumphant—and they have vowed to save you or to perish, and they will keep their word.

PORTLAND, AUGUST 28.

TORNADO.

On Wednesday the 14th instant, as 2 or 3 women and a girl, were walking to visit a friend in the town of Livermore, they were overtaken by a shower; but happening to be near a new house, that was unfinished and uninhabited, they went in for shelter. They had not been there many minutes before a violent gust of wind took the building, which it instantly demolished. The unhappy females were buried in the ruins; two of whom soon died of their wounds, and a third was miserably wounded, having an arm and a thigh broken, so that the bone of the latter appeared several inches through the flesh; but we are happy to learn their are hopes of her recovery.

SALEM, AUGUST 30.

We hear that a partial action has taken place in India, between the British and Tippo Saib's army, in which the latter were defeated with the loss of several thousand men.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 3.

RUSSIAN FLEET.

Captain Roundy, who arrived on Sunday from Russia, mentions that a Russian fleet had been prepared at Cronstadt, consisting of 7 sail of the line, armed enflute, and a number of transports, and had received on board troops, which it was reported they were to debark at Lubeck, which is 40 miles N. E. of Hamburg.—It was further rumoured that the real ultimate destination of this force is against Holland.

INCENDIARIES AT HALIFAX.

Extract of a letter from that place, dated August 19.

"We have had several attempts made to set the navy yard on fire, a strong guard is nightly kept by the soldiers of the garrison, and the boats from the ships of war in turn row all night to prevent any person from landing from the shipping. A ship of war is stationed at the entrance of the harbor to prevent any vessel making an escape by night. Their (those who made the attempt) object, it is supposed, is to set fire to the dock yard, to draw the people from the town, and then to destroy it.—We are not safe in our beds, but I hope, by the diligence of the inhabitants, the incendiaries may be detected."

Appointments—Jabez Champlin, Esq. purser, and Mr. Benjamin Sayer, sailing master of the General Greene.

Mr. John Rush, a lieutenant.

The American frigate Bolton, soon after sailing from hence, fell in with the British frigate of the same name.

NEW-YORK, SEPTEMBER 6.

Mr. Fallon, a passenger on board the brig Friendship, capt. O'Connor, from Cadiz, gives information, that the two American Indiamen which were carried into Cadiz the 6th of June, by a French corvette of 20 guns, called the Mowre, of Bourdeaux, were from Lisbon, bound to India. The French lieutenant that commanded her (the captain remained on shore) reported that one had 4600 dollars in specie on board, the other had 3600—Until the 1st of July they would not grant any water courte, nor permit any person to go to speak to them. The corvette and two prizes were up at Point Hall.

HARRISBURG, AUGUST 20.

On Saturday morning last, W'm Nichols, esq. marshal of Pennsylvania, arrested Benjamin Mayer & Conrod Fahnestock, printers and proprietors of a German Aurora of this borough, for publishing a "false, scandalous and malicious" libel against the laws and government of the United States. They have given bail for their appearance at the district court of the United States, to be held at the city of Philadelphia on the 11th of October next, themselves in 2000 dollars each, and four sureties of 1000 each.

BALTIMORE, SEPTEMBER 9.

COUNTERFEIT DOLLARS.

The public are cautioned against receiving Spanish milled dollars of the year 1796, as many in circulation of that date are supposed to be counterfeit—the difference between the bad and the good ones is scarcely to be discovered from the outward appearance; the bad ones are made of copper with a handsome plate over it, appear to have a finer finish than the true ones, and are somewhat thicker in the middle. We have seen only one, and that being very much bruised, we are unable to give so good a description as we wish. The plate is thin, and by breaking through it, the copper is immediately discovered.

Yesterday morning arrived in this city, commodore Truxton, late of the United States frigate Constellation, on his way to Mount Vernon.

[From a London Paper of July 8.]

"An officer of the Hyena, of 24 guns on Friday arrived at the admiralty, with dispatches from lord St. Vincents, who, with 25 sail of the line blockaded the French fleet in Toulon; admiral Gardner, with 16 sail of the line, blockaded the Spanish fleet in Carthagena; and lord Nelson, with 19 sail of the line, was off Palermo.

SEPTEMBER 10.

Horace Walpole's jocose description of his house at Strawberry Hill.

YOU perceive by my date that I am got into a new camp, and have left my tub at Windsor, it is a little play-thing house that I got out of a toy-shop, and is the prettiest bawble you ever saw. It is set in enamelled meadows, with philigree Hedges:

A small Euphrates through the piece is roll'd,
And little finches wave their wings in gold.

Two delightful roads, that you would call dusty, supply me continually with coaches and chaises: barges as solemn as barons of the exechequer move under my window, Richmond hill and Ham walks, bound my prospect; but, thank God! the Thames is between me & the duchess of Queensbury, Dowagers are as plenty as hounders and inhabit all around, and Pope's ghost is just now skimming under my window by a most poetical moonlight. I have about land enough to keep such a farm as Noah's, when he set up in the ark with a pair of each kind; but my cottage is rather cleaner than I believe his was after they had been cooped up together forty days. The Chenevixes had tricked it out for themselves: up two pair of stairs is what they call Mr. Chenevix's library, furnished with three maps, one shelf, a bust of sir Isaac Newton, and a lame telescope without any glasses. Lord John Sackville predecessed me here, and instituted certain games called cricketalia, which have been celebrated this very evening in honour of him in a neighbouring meadow.

FREDERICKSBURG, SEPTEMBER 3.

COMMUNICATION.

Whatever tends to encourage virtue or depress vice, to promote piety and a true regard for morals, founded on the great principals of our Holy Religion;—whatever has for its object to stimulate mankind to deeds of worth and social excellence, deserve the highest praise from all who yet dare to detest the stupid jargon of a Death of Sleep, or the impious ravings of a besotted PAINE.

The address from Bishop MADISON, read in our Church on Sunday the 18th instant, while it reflects everlasting honor both on the head and heart of the reverend writer, contains so much real and uncontrovertible argument in favor of a religious, moral, and exemplary course of life, that in my opinion, no head of a family could do greater service to his rising progeny, than by putting a copy of it into the hands of his children; having first stored his own memory with the rich and exalted principles it so nobly inculcates. No young man could provide a better antidote to the unbounded temptations to vice and dissipation, which neatly overwhelm our infatuated country, than by having its sentiments treasured in his mind, and the luxuriant original in his pocket, ready to be drawn forth to aid and protect him in the hour of danger.

Giving these reflections their due weight would it not be an object worthy the attention of the friends to morals, and the rising generation, to ascertain means by which this valuable address may obtain a more extensive circulation, at least in this parish and neighbourhood? The task once accomplished would be a pleasant one, and whether this can best be done by procuring a sufficient number of subscribers to defray the expence of a publication, or in any other manner, it is hoped will shortly become matter of serious consideration with some benevolent individual, or body of individuals, whose situation and respectability in society will do honour and add force to the undertaking. In the mean time, it may not be improper for the writer of this to remark, that from the general approbation of the principles, object, and language of the address, which he has had the pleasure to hear repeatedly pronounced, he has little doubt that an undertaking so laudable would be crowned with success.

That persons of fortune and experience united to inclination, may shortly step forth the advocates of piety, and the patrons of every thing that tends to impress a just sense of its importance on the minds of the youth of this town and vicinity, is the ardent wish of one who will not fail to "contribute his mite."

Alexandria, September 12.

Burials at Philadelphia, for the 24 hours ending Saturday noon, 31.

During the present campaign, no person has made a more brilliant figure than the Russian general Suwarrow. In the many wars which this general has been engaged in he has never been defeated; this inspires his soldiers with such confidence that they fight with a valor almost irresistable. Inured himself to the fatigues and penury of a camp, he is constantly in motion; mixing with his soldeiers, they become endeared to him and a laconic order from this second Cæsar, is sufficient to stimulate his men to the most daring enterprizes. At the taking of Ishmael when he acted under the orders of prince Potemkin, that commander well knowing the character of SUWARROW, gave him his orders in the following words, "Allez prendre cette ville." Suwarrow drew off his division, and pointing to the city he cried out to his men—"that fortress and all its contents I give to you, but first it is necessary that we should take it: they immediately advanced to the charge, dreadful carnage ensued, the place was taken and pillaged and inhabitants put to the sword. (Balt. pap.)

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 4.

The letter from Lisbon, given this day, is from a source of the first respectability. It accords with former rumors—and may be a ramification of them. We know the French fleet had not arrived at Genoa, the 18th June.

FROM LISBON, July 2.

"IT is very singular that the French should so long be able to avoid an action with the English. They sailed from Brest about the 26th April, were at Toulon in May, sailed again, pursued by lork Keith, with 20 sail of the line to the coast of Genoa, landed some troops at Savona, protected some wheat vessels to supply Genoa—put into the bay of Vadi—sailed again for Toulon, left there old ships of the fleet there unserviceable:—have come to Carthagena, and formed a junction with the Spanish fleet of 17 sail of the line under repair from damage they had suffered, but expected to be refitted by this time; and should they venture out we leave to divine which side the probability of success lies."

By an arrival from India, we have been favoured with Calcutta papers to March 30, at which time the British government in India, appeared not to entertain the least fears of any hostile movements of the native princes. A large army, however, was on foot to watch the motions and check any hostile movements of Tippoo Sultan. This sovereign has received correct information of the invasion of Egypt by Buonaparte; and has dispatched a French general officer, and other French men lately in his service, with two or three Moormen of consequence, to the isle of France, with papers for the directory of France.

Fifty five American vessels passed Elsinore, from April 16 to June 12 '99, of which thirty-three belonged to Massachusetts—seven to Rhode Island—three to N. Hampshire; seven to New York, three to Pennsylvania, and one to Maryland.

NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER 7.

Twenty five new cases of fever, and 7 deaths were reported to the health committee of this city, during the 24 hours preceding eight o'clock last evening.

We mention with sincere regret, that Dr. Perkins, inventor of the metallic tractors, fell a victim to the prevailing epidemic yesterday morning, after an illness of 6 or 7 days.

WASHINGTON, AUGUST 21.

Letter from col. William Ward, one of the principal settlers on Mad River, to the Editors.

GENTLEMEN,

Since there is so great a rumor through the country respecting an Indian war, it might perhaps be gratifing to the public to hear the circumstances that gave rise to the report from one who has seen and heard the matter investigated between the whites and Indians. It appears the Indians were calling in their scattered people, for the purpose of settling them in some regular manner, as they were before their dispersion by the war. About the same time some ill-disposed persons informed the Shawanese Indians that the Chickasaws were about making war against them, and that some of them were laying in wait to put their hostile designs in execution. At this the Shawanese were much alarmed and made preparations for their defence, from which preparations (and by exaggerated accounts from them too) the whites took alarm, thinking that the Indians intended war against them, which caused some persons, whose situation exposed them to the most dangers to go in search of the truth and by bringing the parties together discovered (in my opinion) that the apprehension of a war between them was wholly groundless, and that some evil minded or imprudent persons, had brought things to the pass they were, through design or folly. I have in my possession the chief of the correspondence on the subject; but as it is lengthy, I don't suppose it worth your trouble to print, or the people to read it; assuring you and them, that what I write is all that can be got out of it. I was present at the investigation of the whole affair.

WILLIAM WARD.

Col. Ward is just come in, and travelled as far as Cincinnati, with four Shawanese chiefs, whose design is to explain the matter to the Governor of the N. W. T. Col. W. has left his family behind him, and is entirely void of any apprehension of danger. The Indians having vacuated a small town where they had crops of corn growing, was the chief cause of alarm. Their reasons for leaving it, have been satisfactorily explained.

On Tuesday last two men were found murdered about 60 miles from Chillecothe, on the road leading from thence to Muskingum river; one of them is said to be a major John M'Farlin, of Cheat, a branch of the Monongahela. The bodies were shot through in several places, dragged some distance from the place where they were killed, and thrown into a run; one of their horses was killed and scalped. Some accounts say, there was a third person also found dead at a considerable distance from the others.

Since hearing the above we have been informed, that two white men are apprehended on suspicion of being the perpatrators of this horrid outrage.

A SPEECH

Spoken by the chiefs of the Shawanese nation, at the Ottoway Town, June 23d, 1799, to be delivered by Mr. Duchouquaint, to col. Ward and major Kenton, living on the Mad River.

BROTHERS,

We are very sorry to hear that you are distressed by some of our young men, which is pointedly against our wishes; you may depend it is done without our knowledge; I mean in regard to horses which might have been stolen or otherwise taken.

We have done our best endeavours to prevent such unjust conduct, and likewise to collect them all together, as we find they know themselves guilty.

We cannot have any objection therefore against your inflicting any punishment that the defaulter may have been guilty of; such of those as may be detected please to let us know of it before any punishment is inflicted; for this reason, we would wish to know who they are, we will then be able to judge and know how to treat those ill deserving men. Some of those fellows have came in, and we have taken the horses that they had in possession on supposition of their having been stolen or taken unjustly, and we have sent them by two of our chiefs, to our father the great chief at Cincinnati.

Brothers,

We would be very sorry to think that you would suppose that we are accessary to such misconduct as some of our young men are guilty of.

We hear that the Wyandots had ten horses in their possession a few days ago, and suppose them to be the property of the white people, and a great many horses were taken the other way by the Pottowatomies.

Brothers,

We are very sorry for what has happened by those bad men, and hope you will not blame us their superiors.

May the Great Spirit above, unite and join our hands together as brothers, that they may never be separated nor that the tomahawk may never be raised against our father as long as we may live.

Brothers,

We hope you will make all your good neighbours acquainted with our wishes, trusting in God to keep with us for evermore.

We are with hand and heart your brothers,

Nalawashig, or Big Thigh.
Mahalepwcheshaw, or Black Hoof.

A GRAND SERIOUS SPECTACLE
(Never performed here) under the direction of of Mr. T. WEST, called

DON JUAN;

OR,

THE LIBERTINE DESTROYED.

Don Juan, — Mr. Green
Don Guzman (the Commandant) — Bignall
Don Ferdinand (the Lover, with a Song) — J. West
Captain of vessel (with a Song) — Warrell
Fisherman, — Watts
Scaramouch, — T. West.

Fisherwomen (with fishing Duet) — Mrs. Green & Miss Gillespie
Ladies——Mrs. Decker, Watts, Stewart, &c.

In act 2d, a FANDANGO, by Miss Gillespie.

This very singular performance, commences with DON JUAN, whose character is that of a most hardened Libertine; fearless of vengeance human or divine, his first intrigue is to seduce the betrothed mistress of his friend, and the Commandant's daughter ANNA, with a serenade, &c.—In disguise he slays the Lover, and murders the Commandant—after which he escapes to the sea side—a beautiful view of a ship riding at anchor—she puts to sea—The Libertine and his man Scaramouch are crossing the ocean, where a violent storm arises, in which the ship becomes a wreck, and Juan is cast on shore—when faint and near expiring, two fisherwomen, compassionating his situation, raise and support him to their cottage, and refresh him. Scaramouch is now seen floating over the waves on the back of a Dolphin. Don Juan, though the very elements combine against him for the enormity of his crimes, is not deterred from further wickedness; he seduces the fisherwomen and murders the father. A pursuit of justice and Alguziles cause him to fly, when meeting with a set of innocent rustic villagers, celebrating a country wedding, he decoys the bride and carries her off.

Act II. commences with the Libertine returned to the City.

An Equestrian Statue

To the Memory of the late Commandant.

Hardened in Villainy, he repents not, although instantly appears in Letters of Blood upon the Pedestal,

"By the I-tell, thy Fate's decreed,
"Heaven will avenge the bloody deed."

At length the Statue nodding, as it were with horror at such horrid wickedness; Scaramouch sees it, and terrified at such a phœnomenon, informs his master, who, in seeming disdan, challenges the Statue to give him a meeting at the banquet, where he next appears in a scene of dissipation and riot. Dreadful and uncommon noise surrounds the tavern, all is thrown into confusion, the women fly, and the Statue entering, seats himself with Don Juan at the table, who with unprecedented daring, asks it to eat and drink, and is refused. The Statue then, after inviting Juan to sup with him at 12 o'clock, in the place where his murdered remains lie, goes off; and Don Juan, after a moment's reflection, in giving some orders to Scaramouch, follows into a dismal Cave, with Monuments, Bones, &c. where an awful scene of expostulation takes place, that the Ghost's finding all his entreaty to a moment's repentance useless, he seizes him and casts him on the ground. The whole scene now changes to a view of

Pandemonium,

The Fiery Abyss, sudden Flames of Fire, &c.

Fear and remorse seize him—he now tries every possible method to escape, but in vain, as the Furies continually meet him at every turn; he kneels with fear and horror, and supplicates for mercy; this being denied the abandoned Libertine, as a wretch void of all pity, he falls on the ground, and becomes a prey to irresistable fate. The Furies now surround him, and the tyrant is hurried away, amidst a shower of fire and thrown into the flames.

Thus ends one of the most Moral and grand Spectacles ever exhibited in any Theatre.

☞ Tickets to be had as usual, of Mrs. West, next door to the Post-Office, and at the Theatre.
